Cambodia and Peking

PHNOM PENH — Cambodia has rejected an offer of financial aid from Red China. "I declined this offer," said Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodia's chief of state, "and explained that since I rejected U.S. aid, I swore never to accept a cent from anyone."

Cambodia's neutrality has been leaning toward Red China in the past few years. Early this week, Sihanouk offered to open up its military installations for inspection to refute the charge that the Vietcong operates from bases in Cambodia.
